Overview

High streets across the UK are facing profound challenges. Once the beating heart of towns and cities, many now struggle with long-term vacancies, declining retail footfall and changing consumer habits compounded by the growth of online shopping. The impacts of the pandemic, inflationary pressures and shifting employment patterns have left visible scars, with vacancy rates in some places such as Bradford and Newport nearing 20%, compared to under 8% in London and Cambridge. This uneven performance reflects deeper structural inequalities in local economies, with weaker high streets often linked to lower spending power, over-supply of retail space and leakage of demand to stronger nearby centres.

In response, the Government has made revitalising high streets and neighbourhoods a key priority for this Parliament. High Street Rental Auctions (HSRAs) now give councils new powers to tackle vacancy by repurposing long-empty premises for local businesses, social enterprises and community hubs. The Plan for Neighbourhoods will channel £1.5bn into 75 areas over the next decade, placing control in the hands of locally-led Neighbourhood Boards to drive regeneration in line with community priorities. In September, the Government announced the Pride in Place Programme, which will provide £5bn of investment for 339 "overlooked" communities across the UK to spend on boosting high streets, parks and public spaces. This alongside the new National Licensing Policy Framework is opening the door for cafés, bars, music venues and cultural centres to thrive in designated hospitality zones. Together, these measures are focused on creating vibrant, resilient and inclusive high streets.

This Policy Foresight digital conference will bring together policymakers, local licensing authorities, planners, heritage specialists, business representatives, and community organisations to explore how these reforms and investments can be translated into thriving, resilient high streets. The conference provides a timely platform to gain practical insights into tackling vacancy, strengthening local economies, repurposing high street spaces and embedding community voice in regeneration strategies to breathe new life into Britain's high streets.

Why Attend?

- Digital Conference featuring presentations and panel discussions with key policymakers, local authority leaders, planners, heritage specialists, BID managers, business voices and community organisations
- Understand the national picture – the impact of the Plan for Change, the forthcoming Small Business Plan, and the new Pride in Place Programme on high street regeneration
- Tackle vacancy and strengthen the daytime economy – Supporting SMEs, independents and community enterprises, while bringing long-term empty premises back into use
- Embed culture and heritage – Using planning reforms, cultural investment, and heritage-led renewal to create inclusive, resilient high streets
- Harness the night-time economy – Boosting vitality through hospitality, cultural venues and safe, inclusive late-night economies
- Share ideas and best practice across local government, planning, housing, the private sector and community groups
- Interactive Question Time sessions with opportunities to engage with all speakers
- On demand – Exclusive access to speaker presentations and post-event resources
